UANNA-ADAPA :

His command like the command of Anu ...

TABLET N° 1

He (Ea) granted him a wide ear to reveal the destiny of the land, He granted him wisdom, but he did not grant him eternal life. In those davs, in those years the wise man of Eridu, Ea had created him as chief among men,
A wise man whose command none should oppose,
The prudent, the most wise among the Anunnaki was he,
Blameless, of clean hands, anointed, observer of the divine statutes,
With the bakers he made bread
With the bakers of Eridu, he made bread,
The food and the water for Eridu he made daily,
With his clean hands he prepared the table,
And without him the table was not cleared.
The ship he steered, fishing and hunting for Eridu he did.
Then Adapa of Eridu
While Ea, ... in the chamber, upon the bed.
Daily the closing of Eridu he attended to.
Upon the pure dam, the new moon, he embarked upon the ship,
The wind blew and his ship departed,
With the oar, be steered his ship
Upon the broad sea . . .

TABLET N° 3

When heard that
In the anger of his heart
His messenger he sent.
He who knows the heart of the great gods
........
To King Ea to come,
To him, he caused words to be borne.
... to him, to King Ea.
He sent a messenger
With a wide ear, knowing the heart of the great gods,
... of the heavens be fixed.
A solied garment he made him wear,

With a mourning garment he clad him, A word he spoke to him. "Adapa, before the King Anu thou shalt go Fail not the order, keep my word

Fail not the order, keep my word

When thou comest up to heaven, and approachest the door of Anu,
Tammuz and Gishzida at the door of Anu are standing.

Enmerkar entry

179. SKL Column III, lines 7-10, the

It is interesting to note that there are no indications of the contemporaneity of the First Dynasty of Uruk with Kish I. In fact, the King List gives every indication that Kish fell to Uruk which then took over political control in Sumer. However, the historical evidence clearly contradicts this view. Many of the early kings in the Uruk royal line were ruling when the house of Kish held the hegemony in the land of the two rivers. We must therefore understand the phrase 'Kish was smitten with weapons and its kingship was removed to Uruk' as a reference to the take-over of Uruk at some point within the Kish dynasty and not necessarily at its end. In other words, the fall of Kish I did not take place at the beginning of Uruk I but some considerable time later. Indeed, we know from a later tradition that Kish remained in overall control of Sumer even into the reign of Gilgamesh, the fifth ruler in the dynastic line of Uruk. It is also interesting to note that the First Dynasty of Kish contains only six rulers bearing Sumerian names whilst twice that number are clearly Semitic in origin (the remaining names being difficult to classify).6 One gets an impression of not only a complex political structure at this time, with city-states in competition for control of the land, but also a multi-ethnic mix within the royal houses themselves. This, I suppose, is to be expected at a time regarded as the dawn of history when everything we understand as political structure is in its infancy.
